

The War of Brilliance

 16  0  3

Chapter 1 by Garrett Smith

Imagine some of the greatest geniuses that ever lived living in the same time. Nicola Tesla, Einstein, Leonardo Da Vinci, and many others living in the same modern timeline. What if they disagreed with the others' beliefs or ideals. This could be enough to make them go to war. This is the War of Brilliance.

The geniuses first organized themselves into groups. They did this finding the ones who most likely to help them, whether they had to pay their allies or they just agreed. It turned out that there was leaders and soldiers. Nicola Tesla and Albert Einstein were the first two to separate themselves and became the leaders of the two groups. Tesla preferred to use electricity and created lighting guns, while Einstein used radiation and very, very small nukes to fight. Einstein was quick to convince Leonardo Da Vinci to join him as a co-leader.
